

Thursday

September 18, 2008

Yoga was cancelled this morning. Susan led meeting this morning. She read Chicka Chicka Boom Boom by Bill Martin Jr. and Imogene's Antlers by David Small. She also read two books that Jacqui brought in from home Wild Animals and Jenny's Surprise Summer.

We had a new friend Eric visiting in the morning. He stayed with us till lunch and then headed home with his mom and grand mother.

For choices, we did a science experiment. We gave each child a cup with milk and a spoon. We showed them some balsamic vinegar. They used their sense of smell to get a feel of the vinegar. We then poured some vinegar into the individual cups and asked the children to stir and see what happens. The milk separated and spoilt. The children were in awe and kind of surprised to see this.

The second choice was decorating a poster board with water colors. This is going to be our new welcome banner since we are no longer PS2 but PSA.

The children checked their bodies and we went to the activity room. The children gathered in a circle. They were given alphabets and asked each at a time to come up, say the alphabet they have and show us a yoga pose. In this way the children got to practice their letters and show us some yoga. The children then got a chance to lead their peers into a little yoga session. They each showed us a pose and we did what they showed.

A.M snack: Bagels, cream cheese, pears, Milk and water.

P.M snack: Cucumbers, tomatoes, ranch dressing, crackers, water

